Battalion Chief Martin Retires...

Battalion Chief Dean Martin has retired after 37 years in the fire service. Dean began his career with the Rogue River Fire District as a student firefighter. He was hired by Rogue River as a full-time firefighter in 1983, and he was promoted up through the ranks. He was a Captain and the district's Training Officer when he left the district in 2003 to become a Fire Science instructor at Chemeketa Community College in Salem. Dean was hired by the City of Coos Bay as a Battalion Chief in 2004.

As a Battalion Chief, Dean served as the Training Officer for the Fire Department, and he managed the Department's Emergency Medical Services (EMS) program until his retirement on September 30th of this year. Dean has been certified as a Paramedic since 1988.

In 2013, Chief Martin was honored as the American Legion's Firefighter of the Year for the Western Region which includes 12 states.

The Fire Department has benefitted for the past 12 years from his extensive knowledge and experience with Emergency Medicine as well as Fire Service training management. The Fire Department would like to wish Dean a happy retirement as he begins this new phase of his life.

15 years of volunteer service...

Joan Morrison recently celebrated 15 years of volunteer service for the City of Coos Bay's Public Works and Community Development Department.

She started her volunteer service for the City in October of 2001. Her volunteer work has evolved and expanded over the years, but her commitment to the Department every Tuesday afternoon has never wavered. In the beginning, Joan helped with filing completed permits and business licenses and helped with special projects. In recent years, she has added scanning (archiving) projects to her list. Her personal mission is to complete scanning all the old building plans before she retires her volunteer service. That is no small task. While she has scanned hundreds of sets of plans and spec books, there are hundreds to go, but she is confident that she will get it done.
